

The Topsy Turvy

KING

ALISON BREWIS/HANNAH GREEN

Jesus had disciples,
his friends who followed him.
He told them he was God's King
who'd come to deal with sin.

An illustration of Jesus with a beard and long hair, wearing a white robe with a brown sash, standing on a rock. He has his arms outstretched and a surprised expression. A large white speech bubble above him contains a golden crown atop a wooden cross, with yellow rays emanating from the cross. Three other men with beards and long hair are shown in various states of confusion: one is sitting on the ground to the left, another is behind Jesus with a question mark and exclamation point above his head, and a third is in the foreground with a question mark above his head. The background is a simple landscape with green bushes and a light brown ground. The overall style is that of a children's book illustration.

But Jesus didn't act like the other kings they knew.

They didn't understand yet
what he had come to do.

Then one day his disciples
were having quite a fight.
They wanted to be greatest
and each thought he was right.

But Jesus told them,

NO WAY!

“The

BIG

must be

small.

A king

must be a servant.

will serve you all.”

And I
